Letter from the MMUN 64 Secretary-General

Honorable Delegates, Faculty Advisers, and Friends of Midwest Model United Nations,

Midwest Model United Nations means many things, at many different times, to many different people. This year in particular, it means a return to form. The challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic continue to indelibly affect all of us, but to be able to still return to St. Louis and engage in substantive debate and diplomatic negotiations is such a privilege. Stepping back into committee to facilitate the work of the delegates present in addressing some of the greatest problems facing the world today is exactly as exciting and stimulating as ever. Thank you, MMUN 63 delegates, for stepping right back up into the spirit of this conference to learn from and teach each other.

My MMUN experience has been primarily as a staff member, but I treasure the experience I had as a delegate. I always considered myself to be confident and competent in discussions of high-level topics, but even with the instruction and assistance of my school's experienced delegates I could not have truly anticipated how much I still had to learn. That perspective - both of myself and of the vast knowledge needed to understand our global community - was an irreversible shift in how I approached my personal education. To be able to help even one MMUN delegate, much less all the delegates at MMUN 63, in a similar way is a gift I cannot properly express my thanks for.

Continuing to progress in our journeys of education and understanding the international system requires commitment. The rest of MMUN 64 Steering and I make a commitment to you to provide, as always, an enlightening and immersive experience next February. Achieving our mission of providing a "venture in practical education" and helping delegates develop their research, writing, public speaking, and negotiation and diplomacy skills is such fulfilling work that we could do no less. Our topics for MMUN 64 will encourage delegates to prepare thorough and thoughtful approaches to longstanding problems and emerging challenges, improving themselves the whole while.

I express my thanks to those who steered MMUN 63 forward, as well as those who built Midwest Model UNs before them, for creating an opportunity to affect new learners in the same positive way that those earlier leaders affected me. I look forward to seeing you all next year.

Continue striving forward,
Lachlann Swanson
Secretary-General
